

USOC BIOGRAPHY

JASON R. THOMPSON

Director, Diversity & Inclusion

Jason R. Thompson was named director of diversity and inclusion for the United States Olympic Committee in April 2012. In his current role, Thompson is responsible for creating and managing the USOC's diversity and inclusion initiatives.

A 25-year veteran in the area of diversity and inclusion programs, Thompson previously served as vice president of diversity and community health improvement at INTEGRIS Health in Oklahoma City. Prior, he served as director for the Office of Diversity at the University of Colorado at Denver and Health Sciences Center. He has served on local, regional and national committees for a multiple organizations, including the Oklahoma Institute for Child Advocacy, Oklahoma Diversity Officers and Practitioners Consortium, United States Commission on Civil Rights, Advisory Board and the Center for African-American Health.

In 2006, he established the Undergraduate Pre-Health Program (UPP) at the University of Colorado Anschutz Medical Campus, which earned honorable mention for the 2013 Examples of Excelencia for its work to accelerate Latino student success in higher education. The UPP program was recognized for the impact, innovative and the promising approach that it has had on Latino students.

Thompson earned a master's and bachelor's degree in sociology from the University of Wyoming and is a graduate of Harvard's John F. Kennedy School executive training program. He currently resides in Colorado Springs, Colo., with his wife and their two children.